of my fortunes, if they checke me here.
Iag. You are in the right:
Good night Leiutenant, I muſt to the watch.
Caſ. Good night honeſt Iago. Exit.
Iag. And what's he then, that ſayes I play the villaine,
When this aduice is free I giue, and honeſt,
Probáll to thinking, and indeed the courſe,
To win the Moore agen? For tis moſt eaſie
The inclining Deſdemona to ſubdue,
In any honeſt ſuite ſhe's fram'd as fruitfull,
As the free Elements: and then for her
To win the Moore, were to renounce his baptiſme,
All ſeales and ſymbols of redeemed ſin,
His ſoule is ſo infetter'd to her loue,
That ſhe may make, vnmake, doe what ſhe liſt,
Euen as her appetite ſhall play the god
With his weake function: how am I then a villaine,
To counſell Caſsio to this parrallell courſe,
Directly to his good? diuinity of hell,
When diuells will their blackeſt ſins put on,
They doe ſuggeſt at firſt with heauenly ſhewes,
As I doe now; for whilſt this honeſt foole
Plyes Deſdemona to repaire his fortunes,
And ſhe for him, pleades ſtrongly to the Moore;
Ile poure this peſtilence into his eare,
That ſhe repeales him for her bodies luſt;
And by how much ſhe ſtriues to doe him good,
She ſhall vndoe her credit with the Moore;
So will I turne her vertue into pitch,
And out of her owne goodneſſe, make the net
That ſhall enmeſh them all: Enter Roderigo.
How now Roderigo?
Rod. I do follow here in the chaſe, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fillies vp the cry: my money is almoſt ſpent, I ha bin to night exceedingly well cudgelld: I thinke the iſſue will be, I ſhall haue ſo much experience for my paines, and ſo no mony at all, and with a little more wit returne to Venice.
Iag. How poore are they, that haue not Patience?

What

What wound did euer heale, but by degrees?
Thou knoweſt we worke by wit, and not by
And wit depends on dilatory time.
Dos't not goe well? Caſsio has beaten thee,
And thou, by that ſmall hurt, haſt caſheir'd Ca
Tho other things grow faire againſt the ſun,
Yet fruites that bloſome firſt, will firſt be rip
Content thy ſelfe a while; by'th maſſe tis mo
Pleaſure, and action, make the houres ſeeme ſl
Retire thee, goe where thou art billited,
Away I ſay, thou ſhalt know more hereafter:
Nay get thee gon: Some things are to be do
My wife muſt moue for Caſsio to her miſtris, Ile ſet her on.
My ſelfe a while, to draw the Moore apart,
And bring him iumpe, when he may Caſsio fi
Soliciting his wife: I, that's the way,
Dull not deuiſe by coldneſſe and delay.

Actus 3. Scœna 1.

Enter Caſſio, with Muſitian

Caſ. MAſters, play here, I will content y
Something thats briefe, and bid g
They play, and enter the Clo
Clo. Why maſters, ha your Inſtruments ſpeake i'th noſe thus?
Boy. How ſir, how?
Clo. Are theſe I pray, cald wind Inſtrume
Boy. I marry are they ſir.
Clo. O, thereby hangs a tayle.
Boy. Whereby hangs a tayle ſir?
Clo. Marry ſir, by many a winde Inſtr maſters, heer's money for you, and the Ge ſique, that hee deſires you for loues ſake, with it.

F